ABOUT SUPPORTIVE HOUSING

Harm reduction: Homelessness, poverty, mental health drug and alcohol use and abuse have always been part of modern society and will not be eliminated. Therefore, it is better to work to minimize the harm than to ignore it, or stigmatize the condition. This model accepts, for better and/or worse, that licit and illicit chemical use is part of our world and this model strives to work to minimize its harmful effects rather than simply ignore or condemn them.

Housing First Model: This “Housing First” model provides housing without preconditions such as sobriety or participation in treatment services. Support services are a key element for many former homeless individuals and families to stay housed in affordable, healthier environments. According to the National Low Income Housing Coalition, studies show that “Housing First” reduces hospital visits, admissions, and duration of hospital stays, and overall public system spending is reduced by nearly as much as is spent on housing.
