

What can you do?

The Environmental Team and the Water Quality Monitoring Program staff encourage the community to become involved. We can all do little things to make big impacts on our communities' environmental health - from picking up trash, volunteering with river clean up, or by assisting as a student intern with water sampling. These volunteers are able to participate and enjoy being outdoors in local waters while learning about sustainable environmental practices with a concentration on our rivers and waterways.

Working Together To Protect Our Environment

ABOUT US

The mission of the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe's Environmental Team is to support Tribal Council's relations with governmental and non-governmental organizations, to ensure Tribal representation in environmental issues, protect Tribal natural resources, and facilitate sustainable development.

Our guiding principle is to follow our cultural teachings that tell us, "As human beings, our original responsibility is to care for our Mother Earth in the same way she cares for us." By working together to protect Mother Earth, we keep her beautiful and healthy. In turn, she keeps us all healthy, both for our generation and the next seven generations to come.
