Chief Davis signs acquisition of land to begin restoration planning efforts

JENNIFER STEVENS

Environmental Manager

Natural resources downstream from Dow Chemical Company’s Midland, Mich. plant have been damaged due to dioxins being released into the Tittabawassee River and its floodplain as far back as 1800s. Federal, state, and tribal governments have been acting on behalf of the public as trustees for natural resources and have conducted a Natural Resource Damage Assessment (NRDA).

The purpose of an NRDA is to determine the amounts and types of restoration that can make the public whole for losses to natural resources over time.

The trustees began planning for and conducting their assessment in 2005 and reached a settlement with Dow in 2019. There was a settlement reached on Nov. 8, 2019 for an estimated $77 million in projects and funding that will restore fish, wildlife, and habitats injured following releases of hazardous substances in past decades from Dow’s manufacturing facility, following many years of assessment and negotiations.

The settlement includes restoration projects to benefit natural resources and provide for public use and enjoyment of them. Sally Kniffen, environmental specialist for the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe has been serving as a representative and trustee on the NRDA Trustee Council for 20 years.

The Tribe was a recipient of NRDA funds to purchase and restore up to 80 acres in the Saginaw Bay watershed as this Tribal Cultural Uses Restoration project.

The Tribe uses wetland areas for hunting, fishing, and gathering practices; important to sustaining cultural activities.

For the project, the Tribe identified potential wetland restoration locations that are expected to have a high probability of successful restoration based on soil type, hydrology, position in the watershed, and tradition. The Tribe identified 80 acres of wetland to restore in Au Gres, Mich. on the Saginaw Bay to complete this project.

The acquisition of this land was completed, and signed by Chief Tim J. Davis, on Wednesday, April 16, and restoration planning efforts are set to begin.

Tribal Council, HR welcomes new Chief Financial Officer Dawn McGrady

JOSEPH V. SOWMICK

Public Relations Manager

On March 20, Tribal Council and Human Resources Director Louanna Bruner extended a warm welcome to the new chief financial officer of Soaring Eagle Casino & Resort and the Saganing Eagles Landing Casino & Hotel.

“We are excited to introduce Dawn McGrady as the newest member of our organization. Dawn is a proud tribal member of the Sisseton-Wahpeton Oyate of the Lake Traverse Reservation in South Dakota,” Bruner said. “She brings a wealth of knowledge and experience with 28 years in the gaming industry, having worked in various tribal casinos across North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, and currently, Michigan.”

Much of McGrady’s career has focused on the advancement of tribal sovereignty through financial independence and provides insight on why that is an important concern for Indian Country.

“It allows for independent decision making and ensures tribal nations are in control of leading their own future,” McGrady said. “Building strong revenue generating tribal enterprises gives the tribes resources to further fund other tribal initiatives that serves their communities and provides for future generations.”

McGrady was hired with her of proven success influencing industry peers and leadership in onboarding new technology and projects by garnering trust and having them see the importance in moving projects forward.

“Michigan is a very competitive gaming market and when having to compete with many other gaming properties and other attractions in Michigan, you must have other offerings to draw a broader audience,” McGrady said. “It allows for an introduction to the property and gives options while visiting. Having more entertainment offerings creates a better guest experience that allows for longer stays with more to do.”

Renovation to an aging property is key to remain competitive in a market that is already highly competitive, she said.

“The look and feel of the property is important when guests have many choices of where they could visit,” she said. “Keeping a property updated improves the guest experience and is essential to growing/maintaining market share. Just as important, keeping the concepts of the amenities updated allows for competitive advantages.”

She said gaming operations across the country have seen the challenges that internet gaming brings to chip away at the existing marketplace. She does offer a strategy to combat the threat of possible lost revenue to gaming globalization.

“Many operations have embraced omnichannel technology related to gaming. The metrics allows the guest to game online, visit the property to redeem their rewards and enjoy on-site entertainment offerings,” McGrady said. “Marketing studies support the omnichannel approach because it provides excellent guest service and integration that makes for a memorable customer experience. This increases guest loyalty to both the online brand and on-site property.”

She firmly asserts in a competitive employment market, the casino financial leadership team can continue the revenue streams of profitability by retaining valued employees.

“Leadership must focus on strategies that ensure team members are feeling valued, appreciated and invested in,” McGrady said. “Supporting team member growth and development plans that create clear succession, offering training, mentorship programs, and creating an engaging work culture for the betterment of the team members.”

Central Michigan University announces new men's basketball head coach

JOSEPH V. SOWMICK

Public Relations Manager

Michigan native and national champion Andy Bronkema has been named the 22nd men's basketball head coach at Central Michigan University, announced CMU Athletic Director Amy Folan and CMU President Neil MacKinnon on April 14.

With 19 years of coaching basketball, Bronkema has spent the previous 12 years as the head coach at NCAA Division II Ferris State University.

Under Bronkema's leadership, Ferris won a national championship, claimed nine combined Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference championships, and guided the Bulldogs to nine NCAA tournament appearances.

"Andy's ability to raise a program to excellence and sustain it at the highest level is impressive," Folan said. "He is a Michigan native who has built his whole career in this state and is well-respected in the coaching ranks at many levels. He is the perfect fit for what we need at Central Michigan and at this time in intercollegiate athletics. Excellence and innovation are qualities that a coach needs to be successful in this current collegiate environment."

Having roots entrenched in winning at the division two level, Bronkema said he believes there is a wealth of experience he can cultivate into the MAC level.

"First of all, being in Division Two for 13 years, these are the names we know and a lot of athletes have moved up. There are good coaches at every single level and there's not television deals everywhere for those coaches," Bronkema said. "There is talent at Ferris State that could play at Central Michigan and there's talent all over division two that can play in our region. That's the climate that we are in but you need to evaluate it all as we are building a roster."

President MacKinnon and Folan presented Bronkema with a number 22 CMU jersey in front of a packed crowd assembled at the McGuirk atrium.

"Coach Bronkema clearly understands how to create and sustain a winning culture that prepares student-athletes for tremendous success on the basketball court, in their educational careers and for life after the game," MacKinnon said. "We are fired up to welcome him and his family to our community as he continues pushing for success as a CMU Chippewa."

One of the first steps Bronkema highlighted was his need to meet with the current players directly to find where their aspirations are.

"If their goals and aspirations are lined up with ours for the program, we can look at keeping them here," Bronkema said. "We also want to continue to assist our student athletes if they want to move on to other opportunities also. We want them to have those fond memories of Central Michigan and continue to do what is best for them."

The type of player Bronkema is looking to recruit, he said, are "high efficiency disciplined players with skills that will carry them through as we develop them."

"We are going to look at spacing the floor and having some shooters and we want guys that have winning on the top of their priorities," Bronkema said. "I realize that is very seldom number one on the list, but it has to be high and you can tell that through the process. It takes a lot of sacrifice and teamwork to get a team in the position to win. Once we get the level of talent we need, our coaching staff can work on the other skills to get our players over the top."

Bronkema earned his bachelor's degree in education from Cornerstone University in 2007 and earned his master's degree in education at Ferris State in 2016.

While at FSU, he's also served as an adjunct professor for the College of Education and Human Services.

Bronkema's father, Joel; sister, Emily Michalak; grandmother; and great-grandmother are all proud CMU graduates.

Bronkema will relocate to Mount Pleasant. He has three daughters: Eliana (15), Cambria (14) and Seneca (9).

Bronkema said he looks forward to meeting with Tribal Council and is excited on how his coaches can work with the SCIT Recreation Department and Tribal student athletes.

Evergreen tree planting and the species, free tree giveaway information

KATIE HAGER

Environmental Outreach Coordinator

The Environmental Team is working on a Great Lakes Restoration Initiative and Bureau of Indian Affairs funded planting “Zhaaw’shko Mtigwaake,” or the Green Forest project, focused on evergreen tree planting to create future sustainability for acquiring species that are best used for traditional Manoomin harvesting push poles.

A total of 10,226 trees will be planted along with future seeding of understory species in following years and is located next to the Ziibiwing Center.

The Environmental Team will also be working on planting nearly 7000 trees through BIA funds on specified Tribal properties. Tree planting species information shown below:

Wild Black Cherry (Ookwemizh): Attracts: butterflies, pollinators, and songbirds. Food source/fruits are eaten by songbirds, mallards, ruffed grouse, pheasants, wild turkeys, quail, many woodpeckers, white-tailed deer, and small mammals.

Red Maple (Zhiishiigimewanzh): Attracts: bees, butterflies, moths, pollinators, small mammals, songbirds, and specialized bees. Seeds are enjoyed by birds. Fruits and buds are primary food sources for squirrels in late winter and early spring. Sprouts are favorite foods for white-tailed deer though the tree is moderately resistant to damage.

Sugar Maple (Aninaatig): Attracts: butterflies, moths, pollinators, small mammals, and songbirds. The seeds are eaten by birds and small mammals and the cavities are used by cavity-nesting birds. Deer and moose browse the stems and leaves. Porcupines consume the bark and can girdle the upper stem. Butterflies and other pollinating insects enjoy the nectar from the flowers.

Bur Oak (Mitigomizh): Attracts: butterflies, moths, and pollinators. Excellent food source for many wildlife species including white-tailed deer, turkeys, squirrels, rabbits, raccoons, and rodents. Once maturity is reached trees provide habitat protection and nesting for numerous species of birds.

American Basswood (Wiigob): Attracts: butterflies, bees, pollinators, small mammals, and songbirds. Seeds are eaten by birds, squirrels, and small mammals. Bees and other pollinating insects enjoy the nectar from the flowers.

White Oak (Mitigomizh): Attracts: butterflies, moths, pollinators, small mammals, and songbirds. The acorns are eaten by woodpeckers, blue jays, small mammals, turkeys, wood ducks, pheasants, grackles, nuthatches, thrushes, other birds, white-tailed deer, and black bear.

Paper Birch (Wiigwas): Attracts: butterflies, moths, and pollinators such as Lunar Moth and the Eastern Tiger Swallow, small mammals, and birds. Seeds are eaten by rabbits, wood ducks, ruffed grouse, turkey, pheasants, blue heron, chickadees, and other birds. In the winter, birch bark is a primary food source for moose and white-tailed deer.

White Spruce (Gaawaandag): Attracts: butterflies, small mammals, squirrels, songbirds, woodpeckers, spruce grouse, pheasant, and other birds. Food source to birds, small mammals, and white-tailed deer. Provides wildlife cover and habitat.

American Larch (Mashklig-waatic): Attracts: butterflies, pollinators, and birds. Grouse will eat seeds and buds while small mammals and deer will use for protection and ground cover.

White Cedar (Giizhik): Attracts: songbirds and small mammals. Provides nesting sites for songbirds and cover for wildlife throughout the winter. Warblers, sparrows, and raptors will also use for nesting habitat. Birds, small mammals, and white-tailed deer will use feed on the branches in late winter and early spring. Cones are a food source for birds, small mammals, and white-tailed deer.

Black Spruce (Zesegaandag): Attracts: butterflies and songbirds. The twigs, leaves, and seeds serve as a food source for wildlife and the trees are often bird nesting sites. White-tail deer will eat; however, only when they do not have other options as it is not preferred. Mice, chipmunks, shrews, and other rodents eat seeds off of the ground. Spruce grouse feed only on spruce needles in the winter. Birds such as chickadees, nuthatches, and grosbeaks will extract seeds from open cones and the ground.

Spongy Moth: Ways to identify the invasive species, how to help at home

DUSTIN HAGER
Natural Resources
Specialist

Spongy Moth (Lymantria dispar) is an invasive species that was introduced to the United States in 1869. In its early stages, young caterpillars will eat large quantities of leaf cover eventually stressing and damaging the trees over time while also making them susceptible to other pests and diseases.

There is one native look-alike species, the white-marked tussock caterpillar; however this caterpillar if skin contact occurs it will form an uncomfortable rash and potentially other allergy issues dependent on the individual – if you are ever uncertain about a species identification you should always avoid touching.

If you are experiencing issues with Spongy Moth caterpillars, you can come into the Planning Department for banding kits available to members upon request.

Ways to identify Spongy Moths and their stages:

- Early emergence (mid-May to mid-July): 0.25 inches long black or brown and will be primarily be moving up the tree trunks towards their first food source.
- Late emergence (shown in image): 1 to 2 inches long characteristic traits emerge, five segments of paired blue dots followed by six pairs of red dots following the topside of the caterpillar. This is the period of most damage inflicted foliage from the species.
- Pre-pupation (mid-July to early August): Caterpillars reach the desired amount of resources to pupate and begin looking for a dark, dry, secluded area to begin its transformation.

- Post pupation emergence: Female moths are 1.5 inches long white with a large black “V” on their forewings. Males are around 0.75 inches long and are a mottled brown grey, and they will appear similar to native moths but will have a clear distinction of being out before dusk looking for females. Native species almost exclusively appear at nighttime. Once the species has hit the adult moth stage, it has two weeks to live as the adults cannot feed, the stage is solely for reproduction.
- Egg masses/overwintering: Varying shades of brown from genetics and sunlight exposure and found in almost any crevice, crack, or any exposed area that would provide shelter from the elements and predators. Almost any structure or object will be used to lay egg masses.

What you can do at home to help?

- Homemade traps are effective at catching caterpillar stages from mid-May up to early August when the species has pupated. Upon request, the Planning Department had sticky band traps available for members to help deal with heavily-infested trees on their property as supplies are available.

- Duct tape, silver side outward, to create a band 8-12 inches, about 4 feet above the base of the tree, ensure that the tape is pressed firmly into each gap to prevent caterpillars from circumnavigating your trap. Then apply a sticky substance like petroleum jelly or Tanglefoot a common insect trap adhesive you can buy at most gardening stores to the band of tape. Leave 2-4 inches at the bottom of the band uncoated for melt/downward flow as temperatures rise since the sticky substance can seriously harm the tree and even led to death of the individual tree. Caterpillars trying to escape predators during the day will attempt to climb the tree only to get stuck in the sticky material and eventually die on the trap. Clean and reapply sticky material as needed to maintain the traps for best results.
- Burlap band traps: Use a section of burlap 12-18 inches wide and long enough to reach around the tree completely (overlap is fine) about 4 feet above the base of the tree, then tie a string around the middle of the burlap allowing the top half to form a skirt with the string being the hinge/crease of the material. Monitor the burlap for caterpillars each day collecting and leaving them in a bucket with soapy water for 48 hours.

- Scrap off egg masses: While unlikely to be effective at reducing the overall population removing egg masses carefully with a plastic knife or scraper can reduce the effects that directly relate around your home. Make sure you place egg masses in soapy water or they will hatch wherever you place them after removal.
- Report your findings to the Midwestern Invasive Species Information Network (MISIN) App or website so those managing the issue have the best possible information to base decision making.

- Do not use flame/torches or pesticides on the species this will damage your trees and do very little towards the problem.

American singer-songwriter Daryl Hall joined by special guest Glenn Tilbrook

NATALIE SHATTUCK
Editor

American singer-songwriter Daryl Hall helped make “dreams come true” as he performed live for fans at the Soaring Eagle Casino & Resort on Saturday, April 5 in the Entertainment Hall.

Hall was joined by special guest and opener, Squeeze’s Glenn Tilbrook.

Daryl Hall performed an hour and a half set, beginning at about 8:45 p.m.

Hall is best known as co-founder and lead vocalist of the duo, Hall & Oates, with John Oates. Hall has also released several solo albums.

For any audience member hoping he would play some Hall & Oates hits, he did. For anyone hoping Hall would play his solo hits, he did that, too.

Hall was ready to get the show rocking with “The Whole World’s Better” from his latest release “D.” Hall began to the right of center stage to play the keyboards for this song.

Hall then moved to center stage, switching to guitar for the second song, “Maneater.” For “Dreamtime,” Hall went to the grand piano on stage right.

Performing several of his solo songs, Hall kept the show rolling with “Can’t Say No To You,” “Walking In Between Raindrops,” “I’m in a Philly Mood” and “Too Much Information.”

The Hall & Oates songs Hall and his band performed included: “Everytime You Go Away,” “Sara Smile,” “I Can’t Go for That (No Can Do),” “One on One,” “Kiss on My List,” “Private Eyes” and “Rich Girl.”

Glenn Tilbrook joined Hall on stage to perform the Squeeze cover “Pulling Mussels (From the Shell).”

The evening ended on a high note as Hall performed the well-known Hall & Oates song, “You Make My Dreams (Come True).”

As indoor Soaring Eagle shows usually begin at 8 p.m., English singer-songwriter and guitarist Glenn Tilbrook began this show at 7:30 p.m.

Tilbrook is known as the lead singer and guitarist of the English new wave band, Squeeze. The band formed in the mid-70s.

Country music singer-songwriter Josh Turner made his return to the Soaring Eagle Casino Resort’s Entertainment Hall on Friday, March 28 as part of his “This Country Music Thing” Tour.

Known for his distinctive bass-baritone vocals, Turner became a popular musician since releasing his debut album, “Long Black Train,” in 2003.

The lights dimmed and “Seminole Wild” by John Anderson blasted throughout the Entertainment Hall.

The evening was filled with Josh Turner’s deep drawl and country twang, as well as a mix of newer songs and his popular hits.

Turner’s band appeared on stage, and he trailed behind to begin the show with “Whirlwind,” “Firecracker,” “Deep South,” “Unsung Hero” and “Time is Love.”

The performance featured several songs about family and faith including “Me and God.” Next up, was the Hank Williams With His Drifting Cowboys cover of “I Saw the Light,” which Turner also recorded. Band introductions followed as the audience applauded each musician.

Turner saved his most well-known hits for last, including the now certified triple-platinum selling “Would You Go With Me.” Next up were “Why Don’t We Just Dance,” “Your Man” and “Long Black Train.”

According to Turner’s website, his album “Long Black Train” celebrated its 20th anniversary in 2023 and was certified platinum by the RIAA with nearly 1.5 million album sales, 1.3 million track downloads and almost 315 million streams (joshturner.com).

Soaring Eagle hosts Brotherhood Tour featuring Los Lobos and Los Lonely Boys

MATTHEW WRIGHT
Staff Writer

Los Lobos and Los Lonely Boys brought their Brotherhood Tour to the Soaring Eagle Casino & Resort on Friday, April 4.

Headlining the concert was Los Lobos, a Mexican-American rock band from Los Angeles. Formed in 1973, the group has gained a following for their unique blend of folk, rock and roll, Tex-Mex, country, R&B, and blues styles.

The band still boasts four founding members in its lineup. This includes David Hidalgo, Louie Pérez, Cesar Rosas and Conrad Lozano. Steve Berlin joined the group in 1982.

Los Lobos began with the bouncy, melodic guitar riffs of “Will the Wolf Survive?,” followed by the upbeat “Evangeline.”

Next up was a trio of hits in “Chuco’s Cumbia,” “Angel Dance” and “Come On, Let’s Go.”

The music kept coming with the bluesy “That Train Don’t Stop Here,” followed by the “Kiko and the Lavender Moon,” “Runner” and “Volver, Volver.”

The band closed out the night with the R&B-infused rock single “Don’t Worry Baby” followed by “Más y más.”

Opening for Los Lobos was Texas-based American rock band, Los Lonely Boys. Much like their tour mates, the group’s musical style infuses

The Grammy Award-winning band features three brothers, Henry Garza (guitars), JoJo Garza (bass) and Ringo Garza (drums).

Los Lonely Boys began with “Rockpango” followed by a blues-infused cover of the classic Creedence Clearwater Revival song “Born on the Bayou.”

The hits continued with “Hooked on You,” “See Your Face,” “Can’t Get No Love,” “So Sensual” and “Friday Night.”

Saving the best for last, Los Lonely Boys ended the night with their No. 1 hit single “Heaven.” The song earned the group a Grammy award in 2005.

Last month, the Ziibiwing Center of Anishinabe Culture & Lifeways hosted two films during the 22nd annual Central Michigan International Film Festival.

William Johnson, curator for the Ziibiwing Center, said the two films featured were the April 9 viewing of “I Am Gitxsan” and the April 10 film “Sugarcane.”

The documentary, “I Am Gitxsan,” follows Phoenix Apperloo, a recent high school graduate reconnecting with his Indigenous heritage in Hazelton, British Columbia, Canada.

The film is inspired by encounters with residential school survivors. The graduate writes a heartfelt letter to Prime Minister Trudeau about the injustices faced by his people.

The documentary highlights the impact of colonialism on the Gitxsan community, featuring insights from experts like Dr. Gabor Maté and showcasing their resilience through protests and legal actions.

It culminates with a moving message of hope and determination, emphasizing the power of the Gitxsan people’s enduring spirit, the beauties of their culture, and their commitment to future generations.

Written, directed, and produced by the multi-award-winning filmmaker Hossein Martin Fazeli, “I Am Gitxsan” is a testament to the resilience of the film tells the story of the Gitxsan Nation’s hard fight against neo-colonialism, with an emphasis on its messages of oneness and peaceful co-existence for humanity,” Fazeli said. “Beneath the surface, however, ‘I Am Gitxsan’ is more than just a documentary on an Indigenous nation; it is a hard-hitting moral parable about the power of good to overcome evil.”

Elders Advisory Board tours new Tribal College building

Summer Youth Worker

On Monday, April 7, the Elders Advisory Board took a tour of the new Saginaw Chippewa Tribal College for the first time, with Kathleen Hart leading the way.

On the tour, facts about SCTC were shared. The idea of the Tribal College started in 1990, and then was brought to life in 2002, residing in the Petro Plaza. In 2024, the SCTC was moved to its current location. The Tribal College went from leasing four buildings to owning their own building.

Enrollment has gone up from 208 to 270 within this past year.

SCTC offers four degrees – Native American studies, business, liberal arts, and science. There are hopes to expand into more programs as the years go on.

SCTC also offers a GED program. There are more than 90 people who have successfully passed their GED at the Tribal College. With the GED program, it is strongly recommended to start sooner rather than later.

There are also new, exciting projects to come for SCTC. For example, the Saginaw Chippewa Tribal Library is in the process of moving into the Tribal College. There will be a broader selection as books as well as a wide variety of children’s books.
